Various phonetic, lexical, and stylistic forms of place names in historical, scientific, artistic texts and colloquial speech are variants of toponyms. In particular, Uzbek poetic texts use different variants of toponyms in terms of weight and style.

Tashkent, the capital of Uzbekistan, is observed in the following versions in poetic texts:

Istiqlol shavqida jo‘shgan Toshkentim,
Yurtboshim nazari tushgan Toshkentim.

Tongda salom bilan balqadi quyosh,

Unga peshvoz chiqar avval ko'hma Shosh.

Buyuk koshonalar, keng, ravon yo'llar,

Chamanzor bog'larim, favvora, ko'llar. (A.Orlov. "Toshkentim").

A.Orlov used the current modern Tashkent and historical Shosh phonetic variants of the Tashkent polyonym in exactly one poem. There are also cases of using the historical version of the polynomial in other poets:

Toshlar uxlari, moshlar uxlari, Shosh uxlari.

Yig'ilajak yoshlar uxlaydi ko'zda. (Faxriyor. "Tun taxayyuli").

It seems that, based on the use of the historical phonetic variant of the toponym, a vivid expression of historical color, attractiveness and harmony was achieved in the poem.

The phonetic variants of Toshket polyonym Toshkan, Toshkant, Toshkand are actively used in live conversation. Muhammad Yusuf uses the literary Tashkent version of the toponym in many of his poems:

Bir xil libos kiymish, ko'rdim, nechalari,

Oybaldog'i yonib turar kechalari.

Yashnab ketar yursa Toshkent ko'chalari,

Uzun ko'yvak turkman qizga uylanaman. (M.Yusuf. "Turkman qiz").

Although the poet named the dedication poem "Tashkent", in the text he used the Tashkan version of the polyson (shoshganim - Toshkanim) to give the folk spirit and ensure inter-stanza rhyme:

Har ko'changni bir hikmati, siri bor,

G'afur G'ulom, Oybekdayin piri bor.

Risq-baraka, totuvlikdir niyatting,

Mehr-oqibat shahrisan, Xiziri bor.

Qayda yursam quchog'iga shoshganim.

Onajonim mening – shahri Toshkanim.

(Muhammad Yusuf. "Toshkent", 1, 24-b.)

Also, in the fifth stanza of the next three paragraphs of this poem, the name of the city is used in the colloquial version with different interpretations: "My mother is my city Toshkan", "My dear is my city Toshkan", "My dear place is my city Toshkan". such as. Yaqub Darmon and Fahriyor used the Tashkent phonetic variant of the polyonym, which is typical of the nature of weight:

Navoiy xokikim bul kun yetib vaslingga, Toshkanda,

Jahoniy shamsi tal'atdan jaxon farzona tuproqsan.

(Yoqub Darmon, "O'zbek tuprog'i", 97-b.)

Qayda yashamasin odamzod, asli

Sangijumon, Rumo yo Toshkand.

Aslida bittidir yurakning kasbi:

Yurak erkka ixtisoslashgan. (Faxriyor).

In the Uzbek poetic speech, various linguistic variants of many historical and modern toponyms are actively used, they serve stylistic and artistic purposes, they serve to express the historicity, authenticity, and dialectal qualities of the text's theme:

Ulug'bek ko'k, Habib Abdulla qa'rda g'azna kashf etdi,

Dahokentsan, Quvo, O'tror, Qiyot, Afshona tuproqsan.

(Yoqub Darmon, "O'zbek tuprog'i", 97-b.)

Surkhandarya horonym (province name) and hydronym are actively used in poetic speech in the style of Surkhan:

Eshitgani kelaversin,

To'y qilamiz dunyoda bir.

Buyuk Vodiy,

Buyoq Surxon –

O'zbekiston, O'zbekiston! (M.Yusuf. "O'zbekiston", 2, 24-b)

In modern Uzbek poetry, the hydronym Sirdarya is used in the phonetic and lexical variants of Sir or Sayhun, Amudarya Amu or Jayhun:

Amu bilan Sirdan suv ichgan,

Zarafshonni loylatib kechgan

Chavandozlar bordir bu elda. (H.Olimjon "O'zbekiston")

Viqoring Tangritog', Pomir, qo'shig'ing Sir, Amudandir,

Sharofbaxshlikda yuz dashting tuman parvona tuproqsan.

(Yoqub Darmon, "O'zbek tuprog'i", 97-b.)

Also, Muhammad Yusuf uses hydronyms in a structural model similar to Sirdaryoga, which is not found in other sources, i.e. in the following morphemic variant:

Zuhro yutdi zahri qon,

Sayxundayro,

Jayxundayro

Oqdi bo'lub nahri qon. (M.Yusuf. "Ey, dil...", 2, 8-b.)

In Uzbek speech, not only the toponyms we mentioned, but also various variants of other toponyms are actively used in accordance with ideological and artistic goals. Of course, appropriate and correct use of variants of toponyms is a proof of the poet's artistic skills.
